Mass Media

What is communication?

Communication is a process of sending and receiving information.

What are the mass media and what role do they play in our lives?

The press, radio, television, Internet - all that is called media. The mass media bring news about what has happened home and in the world.

They spread news quickly and provide education and entertainment.

Daily Press

What is the role of daily press?

The daily press has still an important role. It informs its readers about the latest news in political, cultural and economic life. There are interviews with famous personalities, advertisements, the hottest political issues, documentary photos and editorial.

How often do newspapers come out and where do the editors get the information?

Papers are dailies or weeklies; they are bought at the news stand.

We can subscribe to papers (subscription).

Press agencies get information from their own correspondents.

What can be read inside the papers?

There is news on various areas - political issues, culture, reports, reviews (recenze), sports, essays (fejeton).

What are supplements?

Supplements are pages put inside the main newspaper. There are huge supplements containing a mixture of news and entertainment. Small supplements specialises in different topics such as hobbies, job advertisements or housing or in something what is topical in that time of the year, for example taxes in spring, holidays in summer... .

Magazines

Magazines provide entertainment and information. They are published weekly, fortnightly, monthly or quarterly. Hobby magazines are of various types; they are for motorists, nature lovers, fishermen or sportsmen, for people who are keen on housing, gardening, fashions or animals. There are special cultural magazines, magazines for women, men or children. Magazines contain lots of photographs which makes them more attractive than newspapers.

Professional magazines specialize in specific topics. They are read for example by doctors, engineers, economists or lawyers who are informed about the latest development in their field.

What kinds of magazines do you like? Do you buy magazines? Why/ Why not?

TV and Radio

The radio has no screen and broadcast 24 hours a day. People can listen to it when working, driving, cooking or tidying. It entertains people and provides music, information, news, reports or interviews.

TV brings entertainment, relaxation and education. The Czech Republic has two public service stations - and two commercial stations There is much less advertising on public stations than there is on the commercial ones. ČT2 focuses on documentaries, musical programmes, dramas, concerts, subtitled films, quiz shows, education programmes, language courses, debates and series for children. Commercial programmes focus on series, soap operas, fairy tales, cartoons or bedtime stories for children, contests and quiz shows.

The British channels are which shows programme of general interest like sport or current affairs, shows documentaries, travel programmes, serious drama, music and foreign films. There are commercial stations: If people pay extra, they can have a satellite dish or cable TV and receive more channels.

Internet

Internet is one of the biggest medium. On the Internet, people can join discussion, browse the web, send and receive e-mails, read news, do the shopping, book the journey, chat, search for some information, use e-banking or download music, films or various programmes.

Web is a place on the Internet containing pages with different information. All institutions, schools and companies have their website. The letters www stands for World Wide Web.

There are also disadvantages of using the Internet. Viruses of various types spread through e-mail, hack into the computer system and sometimes destroy it. Also the personal information can be misused.

Do you have the Internet at home? What do you search there for?
