Lord Of The Rings

It is an epic high fantasy novel written by English philologist and University of Oxford professor J. R. R. Tolkien.

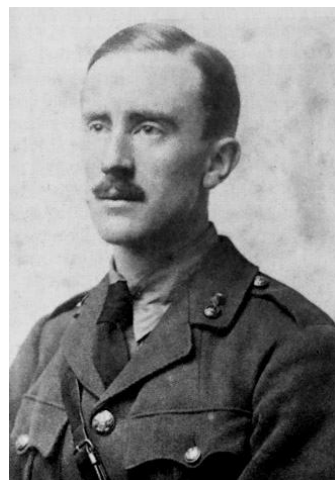

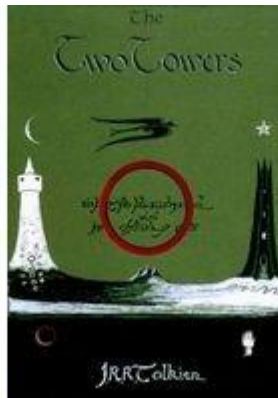

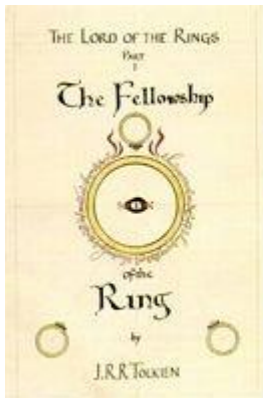

Sir Peter Robert Jackson (born 31 October 1961), is a New Zealand film director, producer and screenwriter who made that famous film.

Originally working with Miramax towards a two-film production, Jackson was later pressured to render the story as a single film, and finally overcame a tight deadline by making a last minute deal with New Line, who were keen on a trilogy.

Principal photography stretched from 11 October 1999 to 22 December 2000 with extensive location filming across New Zealand.

The Return of the King itself met with huge critical acclaim, winning eleven Oscars, including Best Picture and Best Director.
